Wedding of Prince William and Catherine Middleton

The wedding of Prince William and Catherine Middleton took place on Friday, 29 April 2011 at Westminster Abbey in London, England. William was second in the line of succession to the British throne. The couple had been in a relationship since 2003.

John Hall, Dean of Westminster, presided at the service; Rowan Williams, Archbishop of Canterbury, conducted the marriage; Richard Chartres, Bishop of London, preached the sermon; and a reading was given by Catherine's brother James. William's best man was his brother Prince Harry, while Catherine's sister Pippa was the maid of honour. The ceremony was attended by the bride and groom's families, as well as members of foreign royal families, diplomats, and the couple's chosen personal guests. After the ceremony, the couple made the traditional appearance on the balcony of Buckingham Palace. As William was not the heir apparent to the throne at the time, the wedding was not a full state occasion and many details were left for the couple to decide, such as much of the guest list of about 1,900.

William and Catherine first met in 2001. Their engagement, which took place on 20 October 2010, was announced on 16 November 2010. The build-up to the wedding and the occasion itself attracted much media attention, being compared in many ways with the wedding of William's parents in 1981. The occasion was a public holiday in the United Kingdom and featured many ceremonial aspects, including use of the state carriages and roles for the Foot Guards and Household Cavalry. Events were held around the Commonwealth to mark the wedding; organisations and hotels held events across Canada,<sup>[1]</sup> over 5,000 street parties were held throughout the United Kingdom, and about a million people lined the route between Westminster Abbey and Buckingham Palace on the wedding day.<sup>[2]</sup> The ceremony was viewed live by tens of millions more around the world, including 72 million live streams on YouTube.<sup>[3]</sup> In the United Kingdom, television audiences peaked at 26.3 million viewers, with a total of 36.7 million watching part of the coverage.

Engagement announcement

Prince William and Catherine Middleton first met in 2001 while studying at the University of St Andrews.<sup>[4]</sup> They began dating in 2003.<sup>[5]</sup> On 16 November 2010, Clarence House stated that William was to marry Catherine "in the Spring or Summer of 2011, in London".<sup>[6]</sup> They were engaged in October 2010, while on a private holiday in Kenya; William gave Middleton the same engagement ring that his father had given to William's mother, Diana, Princess of Wales<sup>[7]</sup>—an 18-

Matrimonio del principe William e Catherine Middleton

Il matrimonio del principe William e Catherine Middleton ha avuto luogo venerdì 29 aprile 2011 presso l'Abbazia di Westminster a Londra, Inghilterra. William era il secondo in linea di successione al trono britannico. La coppia aveva una relazione dal 2003.

John Hall, decano di Westminster, ha presieduto la cerimonia; Rowan Williams, arcivescovo di Canterbury, condusse il matrimonio; Richard Chartres, vescovo di Londra, predicò il sermone; e una lettura è stata tenuta dal fratello di Catherine, James. Il testimone di William era suo fratello, il principe Harry, mentre la sorella di Catherine, Pippa, era la damigella d'onore. Alla cerimonia hanno partecipato le famiglie degli sposi, nonché membri di famiglie reali straniere, diplomatici e ospiti personali scelti dalla coppia. Dopo la cerimonia, la coppia ha fatto la tradizionale apparizione sul balcone di Buckingham Palace. Dato che William non era l'erede al trono all'epoca, il matrimonio non fu un'occasione ufficiale e molti dettagli furono lasciati alla decisione della coppia, come gran parte della lista degli invitati di circa 1.900 invitati.
